

Ben Roethlisberger, the Pittsburgh Steelers quarterback has been accused of sexually assaulting a woman in Georgia at a club in Atlanta. No formal charges have been filed, but the young girl was treated at a nearby hospital and police have already interviewed Ben. This is the second time he has been labeled an abuser. Last year a woman from Reno made a similar claim and is suing Ben for tons of money. Big Ben has hired a high powered Atlanta attorney.

Sandra Bullock captured more than just an Oscar at Sunday night's Academy Award ceremony. The star is also the runaway winner in a PopEater.com poll regarding wardrobe. Three out of five people taking part in the online survey say they think Bullock, with her Marchesa gown, was the best-dressed woman at the event.

If you believe the Enquirer, Lindsey Lohan reached out to Britney Spears on advice on how to get her life back on track. Apparently this didn't sit well with Britt's dad Jamie, who's trying to keep all bad influences away. Jamie has banned Britney for talking to Li-Lo.

Betty White is on her way to late night television. People.com reports that the famed actress is confirming that she'll host an upcoming episode of "Saturday Night Live." The 88-year-old has been championed by Facebook enthusiasts as a perfect host for the NBC comedy show for several weeks. The ground swell of support followed White's sassy turn in a Snickers ad that aired during Super Bowl 44 last month.